History of the Karmapas The Odyssey of the Tibetan Masters with the Black Crown Shambhala Publications Masters of esoteric knowledge and miraculous practices, the lineage of the Karmapas is the earliest of all the recognized incarnate lineages and is said to descend from the great Indian tantric master Tilopa through a chain that includes Naropa, Marpa, and Milarepa. The Karmapas are distinguished by their black crowns, said to have been woven by dakinis and symbolizing the activity of the buddhas. Unlike other Tibetan Buddhist lineage heads, each Karmapa has specific knowledge of his next reincarnation and leaves behind a "Last Testament," a letter to his disciples describing the place and circumstances of their future rebirth, the name of their parents, and so on. At a very young age, each successive incarnation is often able to recognize himself as the Karmapa. In their recounting of the histories of the seventeen Karmapas, the authors reveal the universal and marvelous concealed in the everyday world. Their lively account peppered with anecdotes is the most comprehensive in the West on this subject, with information from Tibetan, Chinese, Mongolian, French, and English sources. The Year Of The Flood Hachette UK By the author of The Handmaid's Tale and Alias Grace The sun brightens in the east, reddening the blue-grey haze that marks the distant ocean. The vultures roosting on the hydro poles fan out their wings to dry them. the air smells faintly of burning. The waterless flood - a man-made plague - has ended the world. But two young women have survived: Ren, a young dancer trapped where she worked, in an upmarket sex club (the cleanest dirty girls in town); and Toby, who watches and waits from her rooftop garden. Chambers' Edinburgh Journal Three Friends Roy Bedichek, J. Frank Dobie, Walter Prescott Webb University of Texas Press Roy Bedichek, J. Frank Dobie, and Walter Prescott Webb—a naturalist, a folklorist, and a historian—all taught at the University of Texas, lived only a few blocks apart, and saw each other almost every day. The true cement of their friendship, however, was the correspondence that makes up much of this book. They wrote not to exchange information, but to communicate ideas, to nail down the generalities of conversation, and, above all, to challenge, encourage, and stimulate one another. William A. Owens, who knew all three personally, has tied their letters together with his own observations and with transcripts of tape interviews with the men. The result is a unique book, a combination of biography and personal history that portrays not only the three friends, but the land they loved as well. Mama, I'm Lonely! Createspace Independent Publishing Platform In a world of endless distraction and countless ways to flee solitude, we can sometimes forget how to enjoy our own company. Mama, I'm Lonely reveals this dilemma faced by Stella, a six-year old elephant. Stella tries to fill the emptiness she feels inside her heart by doing things she loves with people she loves, but the void remains. She turns to her mother for help, for Mama Elephant always seems content and happy. Her mother explains a beautiful truth to Stella. "It isn't always easy, but if you can learn to be comfortable around yourself, if you can learn to enjoy your own company, you'll never be lonely again." Mama, I'm Lonely is a book for children from ages 4 to 9, with a message that is timeless.
