He felt that a department-wide review needed to be conducted "from the bottom up" because of the dramatic changes that have occurred in the world as a result of the end of the Cold War and the dissolution of the Soviet Union. These changes in the international security environment have fundamentally altered America's security needs. Thus, the underlying premise of the Bottom-Up Review was that we needed to reassess all of our defense concepts, plans, and programs from the ground up. This final report on the Bottom-Up Review provides the results of that unprecedented and collaborative effort. It represents the product of hundreds of individuals' labor and dedication. It describes the extensive analysis that went into the review and the recommendations and decisions that emerged.* Commerce, Justice, Science, and Related Agencies Appropriations for 2015 Hearings Before a Subcommittee of the Committee on Appropriations, House of Representatives, One Hundred Thirteenth Congress, Second Session Review of Department of Defense Detention and Interrogation Operations Hearings Before the Committee on Armed Services, United States Senate, One Hundred Eighth Congress, Second Session, May 7, 11, 19, July 22, September 9, 2004 Amicus Helicopters, discusses how helicopters fly and the various ways that helicopters are used in today's world. The United States military needs to have the capabilities to consolidate combat gains to prevent stalemate and instability. The U.S. military is the only agency with the potential to restore order to areas during and after major combat operations. To do this, the joint force relies on the Army. While the Army has developed some capability to consolidate gains, it continues to conduct operations following large scale combat that are ineffective and counterproductive. The United States Army must develop and expand its capabilities to consolidate gains, or it will be difficult or impossible to transition foreign occupied areas back to the civil authorities and stable governments. This thesis examines the organization, training, leadership and education dimensions of the Joint Capabilities Integration and Development System (JCIDS) model applied to rule of law operation to identify how the Army can effectively conduct civil control during and immediately following large scale combat operations. If the U.S. Army invests in capabilities to conduct rule of law operations, it will be capable of rapidly and decisively restoring order and meeting national strategic objectives. The traditional role of law enforcement has vastly expanded to require extraordinarily broad-based emergency response capabilities. Law Enforcement Responder: Principles of Emergency Medicine, Rescue, and Force Protection prepares homeland security leaders, law enforcement officers, security professionals, and public safety officials for the wide range of emergency responses they must perform on a daily basis. Law Enforcement Responder explores the vast array of law enforcement demands for emergency responses including resuscitation, trauma, and illness, as well as the essential considerations for special populations such as children and the elderly. The textbook addresses all of the competency statements in the National EMS Education Standards at the Emergency Medical Responder level, as well as additional lifesaving content specific to law enforcement that far exceeds the core curriculum. Law Enforcement Responder accommodates the tremendous diversity in the modern law enforcement mission by providing current and expert emergency medicine content in a highly adaptable format. Nationally recognized experts present key mission-specific topics, including police officer survival, tactical medicine, executive protection, active shooter response, canine first aid, military medicine, travel medicine, in-flight emergencies, ordnance ballistics, less lethal munitions, incarceration and prisoner care, fire-rescue and hazardous materials, and much more. Department of Homeland Security Appropriations for 2010 Hearings Before a Subcommittee of the Committee on Appropriations, House of Representatives, One Hundred Eleventh Congress, First Session Cumulative Bulletin - Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco & Firearms Air University Library Index to Military Periodicals Air Force Regulation.
